

Faculti Summary

<https://faculti.net/the-responsibility-of-intellectuals/>

Here are some articles that discuss themes similar to those in your video, including reflections on the Vietnam War, the role of intellectuals in shaping narratives, and the moral implications of war:

1. "The Vietnam War and American Intellectuals" - This article examines how American scholars and intellectuals reacted to the Vietnam War, highlighting both the support for the war and the significant dissenting voices that emerged and fought against mainstream narratives.
2. "The Legacy of Vietnam: An Intellectual History" - This piece explores the aftermath of the Vietnam War and how various historians and intellectuals have interpreted its significance, focusing on the politics of memory and the struggle over narratives about U.S. involvement in Southeast Asia.
3. "Narratives of Power: The Media and the Vietnam War" - This article analyzes the representation of the Vietnam War in media and its impact on public perception, emphasizing the role of media in shaping and sometimes distorting the official narratives of conflict.
4. "Marginal Voices: Dissent and the Politics of Memory" - This video discusses the importance of dissenting voices in historical discourse, drawing parallels between various political crises, including the Vietnam War, and the ways in which dissenters are often silenced or misrepresented.
5. "Intellectuals and War: A Historical Perspective" - This article provides an overview of how intellectuals have responded to military conflicts throughout history, examining case studies including the Vietnam War, the Dreyfus affair, and contemporary conflicts.
6. "Truth-Telling and the Challenge of Historical Memory" - This piece investigates the challenges faced by scholars and intellectuals when confronting established historical narratives, emphasizing the necessity of truth-telling in the context of wars and political violence.
7. "Civic Responsibility and Dissent: The Role of Intellectuals in Society" - This article discusses the ethical obligations of intellectuals to challenge state narratives, exploring instances of success and failure in various political contexts, including the Vietnam War.

These articles share common threads with your video regarding the examination of the Vietnam War, the representation of history, and the responsibilities of intellectuals in critiquing state power and narratives.