

Here are five key points from the video:

1. Concept of Crimes of Solidarity: The study explores the notion of "crimes of solidarity," where individuals in Italy face penalties for providing assistance to migrants, highlighting a growing trend of criminalization since the coalition government took power in 2018.
2. Intimate Nature of Criminalization: The video emphasizes that the most significant forms of criminalization experienced by those aiding migrants often stem from their personal relationships, such as family and friends, rather than solely from state or legal sanctions. This reflects what the author describes as the "intimate life of criminalization."
3. Political Convideo and Emotional Governance: The author discusses how political discourse shapes emotional responses among citizens towards migrants, leading to feelings of solidarity or hostility. This relationship fosters a cycle of reactions where state narratives influence societal attitudes and vice versa.
4. Framework of Affective Citizenship: The paper employs the framework of "affective citizenship" to examine how emotions are tied to political practices and govern the ways citizens engage with migrants, indicating that effective citizenship encompasses complex emotional and political dynamics.
5. Resistance and Solidarity: The concluding thoughts highlight that solidarity with migrants can challenge existing governance structures regarding migration and borders. While citizens can be governed by emotions influenced by political rhetoric, they also possess the agency to resist these narratives through acts of solidarity.
