

Here are some articles that discuss similar themes related to the criminalization of aiding migrants, solidarity, and the socio-political convideo surrounding these issues:

1. "Solidarity Under Siege: The Criminalization of Helping Migrants in Europe"

This article explores the growing trend across Europe where individuals and NGOs providing aid to migrants face legal repercussions. It discusses the impact of political narratives on public perception and how this affects grassroots support for asylum seekers.

2. "The Politics of Solidarity: Family, Community, and Migration in Contemporary Italy"

Focusing on Italy, this article looks into how family and community dynamics shape attitudes towards migration and those who support migrants, examining the tensions that arise when personal relationships intersect with political issues.

3. "Intimate Lives and Public Policies: The Duality of Solidarity in Migration Convideos"

This study delves into how personal relationships influence perceptions of migration policy. It analyzes how solidarity with migrants can create conflict within families, reflecting wider societal attitudes towards immigration.

4. "From Welcome to Criminalization: The Role of NGOs in Migrant Support Across Europe"

This article reviews how non-governmental organizations have been affected by anti-migrant sentiment and associated legal changes, with a focus on narratives constructed by the media that shape public opinion on migration.

5. "Border Politics: The Interplay Between Solidarity, Law, and Social Norms"

Investigating the legal and social frameworks around migration, this article discusses how solidarity actions can challenge state regulations while revealing societal divisions over issues of race, identity, and belonging.

6. "The Social Dynamics of Migration Aid: A Study of Activists in Urban Settings"

This research focuses on activists and volunteers in cities like Florence and Turin and how their work challenges societal norms, examining the reactions they face from their communities and families.

7. "Identity, Belonging, and the 'Other': Understanding Migrant Support in an Era of Hostility"

This article analyzes the cultural and social ramifications of aiding migrants in an increasingly hostile environment, reflecting on how personal beliefs and relationships shape one's willingness to act in support of marginalized groups.

8. "Political Discourse and Its Impact on Solidarity Movements: The Italian Case"

This article reviews how shifts in political leadership and ideology influence grassroots movements supporting migrants, particularly looking at changes since 2018 and their societal implications.

These articles collectively explore themes of solidarity, the criminalization of support for migrants, the impact of familial and social relationships, and the broader socio-political convideo that informs public attitudes towards migration.