

Here are some similar articles discussing topics related to municipal amalgamation and its effects on electoral turnout, voter participation, and local governance:

1. "The Impact of Municipal Mergers on Voting Behavior: Evidence from Canada"

This article explores how municipal amalgamations in various Canadian provinces have affected electoral turnout and local political engagement, highlighting similarities in trends across different regions.

2. "Amalgamation and Voter Turnout: A Longitudinal Study"

This study examines the long-term effects of municipal mergers in a specific country over several election cycles, providing insights into the patterns of voter participation before and after amalgamation.

3. "Effects of Local Government Restructuring on Citizen Engagement"

This article discusses the broader implications of local government restructuring, including municipal amalgamation, on citizen engagement and political participation across various European countries.

4. "Voter Turnout and Local Government Size: Analyzing the Relationship"

This research analyzes the relationship between the size of local government units and voter turnout, comparing findings from jurisdictions with and without recent municipal mergers.

5. "The Politics of Amalgamation: Understanding the Dynamics of Local Governance Reform"

This paper examines the political convideo of municipal amalgamations, including the motivations behind these reforms and their impact on electoral behavior and community identity.

6. "Community Identity and Electoral Participation in Amalgamated Municipalities"

This article investigates how community identity affects electoral participation in regions that have undergone municipal amalgamation, focusing on social cohesion and sense of belonging.

7. "Participatory Governance in Local Mergers: Lessons from Recent Reforms"

This study discusses the importance of citizen participation in the decision-making process regarding municipal mergers and how it can influence the outcomes related to voter turnout and community satisfaction.

These articles can provide additional perspectives and empirical data related to the implications of municipal amalgamation on electoral turnout and citizen engagement in local politics.