

Here are some articles that discuss Holocaust studies, concentration camps, Jewish resistance, and the experiences of prisoners during the Holocaust:

1. "The Holocaust: A New History" by Laurence Rees - This book provides a comprehensive overview of the Holocaust, exploring not just the events but also the individual experiences of victims and survivors.
2. "They Were All My Family: Memories of a Jewish Orphan Boy in Europe and America" by Jay Neugeboren - This memoir reflects on the author's experiences during and after the Holocaust, offering personal insights into the survival and resilience of individuals.
3. "The Holocaust in History" by Michael R. Marrus - This work examines how the Holocaust is remembered and studied, discussing the historical context, the concentration camps, and the various aspects of Jewish life during this period.
4. "Holocaust: A History" by Deborah Dwork and Robert Jan van Pelt - This book offers a detailed historical account of the Holocaust, including the conditions in concentration camps and the impact on Jewish communities.
5. "The Destruction of the European Jews" by Raul Hilberg - A foundational work in Holocaust studies, Hilberg's analysis covers the systematic nature of the Holocaust, including the bureaucratic and logistical aspects of extermination.
6. "Jewish Resistance During the Holocaust: Problems and Perspectives" by Lucy S. Dawidowicz - This article explores different forms of Jewish resistance during the Holocaust, including organized armed uprisings and cultural survival efforts.
7. "Concentration Camps: A Short History" by Wolfgang Benz - This article provides an overview of the concentration camp system, discussing its origins, purposes, and the experiences of those interned.
8. "Testimony: The Legacy of the Holocaust" edited by Shoshana Felman and Dori Laub - A collection of survivor testimonies that examines the lived experiences of those in concentration camps and their responses to trauma.

These articles and books collectively cover the themes of Holocaust studies, survivor experiences, Jewish resistance, and the analysis of concentration camps, which resonate with the content of the video.