

Faculti Summary

<https://faculti.net/conceptualizing-and-contextualizing-executive-wisdom-as-a-framework-for-business-leadership-a-grounded-theory-approach/>

Here are several articles that discuss similar themes as the video you , focusing on leadership, wisdom in decision-making, cultural perspectives on ethics and business, and the interplay between rationality and emotional intelligence in leadership:

1. "Cultural Dimensions of Business Leadership: Understanding Wisdom Across Borders"
- This article examines how different cultures interpret wisdom in leadership roles, comparing the practices of business leaders in various regions, including Western and Middle Eastern countries. It emphasizes the influence of cultural norms on decision-making processes.
2. "The Role of Emotional Intelligence in Leadership Effectiveness: A Cross-Cultural Study"
- This study investigates the varying importance of emotional intelligence in leadership effectiveness across different cultures. It provides insights into how emotional engagement is perceived differently in organizational contexts globally.
3. "Wisdom in Leadership: Bridging the Gap Between Rationality and Ethics"
- Exploring the concept of wisdom in leadership, this article discusses how leaders can blend rational decision-making with ethical considerations and the implications for effective leadership practices in diverse settings.
4. "Leading with Wisdom: A Comparative Study of Business Leaders in the Middle East and the West"
- This comparative research focuses on how business leaders from Middle Eastern countries approach decision-making differently than their Western counterparts, especially in terms of rationality, emotional engagement, and ethical considerations.
5. "Grounded Theory in Leadership Research: A Methodological Approach to Understanding Complex Decision-Making"
- This article outlines the grounded theory methodology and its application in understanding complex decision-making in leadership, highlighting how iterative data collection can help in capturing the nuances in leaders' reasoning processes.
6. "Ethics and Decision-Making in International Business: A Cultural Perspective"
- This article discusses the ethical challenges faced by leaders in international business contexts, focusing on how cultural differences shape ethical frameworks and decision-making processes.

Each of these articles can provide deeper insights into the topics of leadership, wisdom, ethical decision-making, and cultural influences, similar to the study you summarized.