

Here are some articles that relate to your video, which discusses work-family policies, parental leave, women's labor market inclusion, and gender equality:

1. "The Impact of Family Policies on Gender Equality in the Workforce" - This article reviews various family policies, including parental leave and childcare provisions, and assesses their effects on women's participation in the labor force and broader gender equality in the workplace.
2. "Parental Leave Policies and Women's Employment: A Comparative Analysis" - This research compares parental leave policies across different countries and examines how these policies influence women's employment rates and gender attitudes in the workplace.
3. "Long-term Parental Leave: Balancing Work and Family" - This article discusses the implications of extended parental leave for both mothers and fathers, examining the potential benefits and drawbacks for gender equality and labor market outcomes.
4. "Childcare and Gender Equality: The Role of Early Childhood Education Policies" - Focused on early childhood education and care (ECEC), this paper analyzes how investments in early education can support working mothers and promote gender equality in the labor market.
5. "The Gender Wage Gap: Understanding Horizontal and Vertical Segregation in the Labor Market" - This article delves into occupational segregation by gender, addressing how job types and pay disparities contribute to the overall gender wage gap, linking it back to caregiving responsibilities and labor market participation.
6. "Does Paid Leave Help or Hinder Women's Employment? Evidence from International Data" - This study investigates the effects of various paid leave policies on women's employment trajectories and occupational choices, providing empirical evidence to support or dispute claims made in earlier literature.
7. "The Effects of Family Policy on Women's Labor Market Outcomes: A Review of the Literature" - This review summarizes existing research on family policies' impacts on women's employment rates, hours worked, and overall career advancement, highlighting key differences across various policies.
8. "Discrimination in the Labor Market: Evidence from the Parental Leave Debate" - This paper presents qualitative and quantitative evidence on how parental leave entitlements can lead to discriminatory practices in hiring, particularly toward women of childbearing age.

These articles collectively enhance the discussion of the complexities surrounding family policies, gender inclusion in labor markets, and the impact of various types of leave on women's employment and gender equality.